

Co-create a community in which people will enjoy social affluence

Associate Professor Yumi TAKASAWA

Illustration

Content:

My research interest is co-create a community in which people will enjoy social affluence. We live in a population declining society that has never been experienced. It is also required to create communities while facing various disasters and problems associated with globalization. There is no absolute right answer. Even if something resolves, the desired condition will not continue. As people in the area catch changes in social conditions, and create a new value for the region while building diverse networks both inside and outside the region, and to "Manage" the region will create the future of the region thinking about.

When trying to create such a community, first of all, it is important to guide what kind of area you want to do, how you want to live there, and how you want to live. Furthermore, in order to practice them, it is necessary to create a mechanism, use an engine, and start moving, using scientific methods.

Appealing point:

I am aiming to backwardly support from the academic standpoint to hope for drawing vision of community development and learning from advanced case examples.

Yamagata University Graduate School of Science and Engineering
Research Interest : Urban planning, Sustainable tourism

E-mail : takasawa@yz.yamagata-u.ac.jp

Tel : +81-238-26-3718

HP : : <https://takasawa96.wixsite.com/mysite>

